Welcome to all old, new and prospective Gray Panthers and friends! After a hiatus of two years our network began meeting again during 2003 under new Convener Judy Lear. In 2004 we held six membership meetings, formed a temporary board of directors meeting monthly, marched and demonstrated, and honored veteran members of 20 years or more. We now have 50 dues-paying members and continue to grow. Housing and Media Watch committees have formed, and we hope to begin committees for other issues like health, education, peace, and Social Security during 2005. Your voice, ideas, spirit, support, and 2005 dues are needed!

Lillian Sarno, 95, joined the New York Gray Panthers in the mid-1970s; since 1980 she has provided leadership and wisdom as Convener, speaker, or active member. On October 30, 2004, she reflected on the future of the Gray Panthers.

"I want to add ... my welcome to all.... Now I'm going to talk a little more seriously about the Gray Panthers because while I had a lot of fun with them, I don't think they're funny. I think they're very serious.

After 9.11 as a lot of non-profits did we suffered a sudden loss of people. All of a sudden nobody could come to meetings; we couldn't find anybody. We felt so dispirited that they didn't want to do anything. However a small cadre got together and we continued to work as Gray Panthers. We moved our office from the Jewish Guild [for the Blind] to [West Park Presbyterian] church on 86th Street and we continued working there. So we have maintained ourselves through these years and now that Judy with her youth and her energy has taken over, we certainly expect to get back to at least what we had and maybe more if we're lucky.

I want to say something about the society in which we operate. Every empire has the seeds of destruction within it when it starts ... and we have them too. The seed of our destruction is greed; greed is what has brought down this country today. We have to recognize that and see that if we're going to continue to exist ... we'll do it differently and we'll do it better, and we won't be greedy. We'll control ourselves.

That is where the Gray Panthers fit in perfectly, because we believe in social justice, that's our main concern. Social justice means what [John] Edwards has been saying. That you don't have a country where people can work a regular job and not make enough to live. We don't have a country where people work and still have to go to a food bank to finish out the month. We don't have a country where people who can't do what they need to do don't get help to do it. We don't want that kind of country ... and we've got to make sure that everybody doesn't. That's a big job.

But we started with a very big job ... to stop people from forcing people to retire. There was a time when everybody had to retire, whether they wanted to or not, whether they could do the work or not. Maggie Kuhn made that her first and most ambitious project. And she succeeded. Now we have age discrimination ... we have to keep fighting that. We have to keep fighting it by supporting Social Security. We have to keep fighting it by supporting affordable housing. It's a disgrace in a country like this that people who can't find housing, that the homeless, go to shelters. It's disgusting. We have a right not to allow it. We've got to stand up for our rights and we've got to teach other people to do it.

We're for peace and disarmament--of course. We're for Social Security ... for Medicare, of course. And ... we do try to help the poor; we don't do a good job of it but we do try. The rich don't need our help; they do very well without it. They get all sorts of extra goodies, like tax deductions. But the middle class is really lost. If you're middle class you have a lot of trouble finding services, and when you find them they are very expensive.... For some reason they think middle class means you have a lot of money. A lot of us don't have a lot of money. We're living on the results of our earnings, our Social Security, and if you're lucky, our pension....

We're going to have to work very hard. Unfortunately I'm not like Hazel Sawyer who is still running around at 95. My running around days are over, and believe me I miss them. But you have to live with what you've got.... With what I've got I still can think, thank God, and I still can influence ... people I meet [and] know. I'm continuing to do that and I hope we all will. And then we'll have a successful Gray Panthers, and make some changes in the world."
